The Programme

Overview

Higher education institutions across the globe are undergoing significant transformations due to various external factors such as post-pandemic, economic, political, social, and technological trends, that are reshaping the landscape of internationalisation.

Internationalisation has evolved in higher education over the past 30 to 40 years from a marginal aspect to a key aspect of the reform agenda. It also has evolved in different directions and, in that process, some previous values have got lost, and past priorities have been replaced by others. Economic rationales have become more dominant, but as the society is facing extreme challenges, summarized in the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) of the United Nations, internationalisation needs to respond to these challenges and goals.

This face-to-face programme is for those driving the internationalisation agenda within their universities designed by experienced academics at Cardiff Metropolitan University

The programme will adopt a holistic approach to internationalisation, ensuring its relevance and impact to different regional contexts.
